Wastewater Professionals Meet for Convention Jan. 16-18 in Springfield

Springfield, Mo. – More than 200 people are expected to attend the Missouri Smallflows Organization convention Jan. 16-18 at the Springfield Expo Center.

Missouri Smallflows Organization is a non-profit group that provides educational opportunities to wastewater professionals across the state.

MSO has teamed up with the Missouri Association of Plumbing, Heating, and Cooling Contractors (MAPHCC) to bring a broad-topic and informative conference and trade show to Springfield.

Missouri Attorney General Chris Koster will present the keynote address Jan. 17. He will be speaking about the Lake of the Ozarks Wastewater Symposium.

Ellen Rohr of Bare Bones Biz will present an all-day session Jan. 16 regarding better business choices; her afternoon presentation is titled “Where did the money go?”

Other speakers include professionals from the Department of Natural Resources, Missouri 1-Call, onsite wastewater professionals and other plumbing professionals.

Starting Jan. 17, MSO and MAPHCC are sponsoring the trade show in the Expo Center featuring vendors and their products.

More details, including registration information, can be found on the MSO website at www.mosmallflows.org.

The mission of Missouri Smallflows Organization is to educate installers, regulators, on-site soil morphology evaluators and other professionals involved in the wastewater industry in the latest technologies available; to provide a forum for wastewater professionals to demonstrate proper installation of wastewater systems; and to encourage wastewater professionals to educate homeowners, homeowner associations and the general public on location, operation and maintenance of their on-site sewage treatment system to assure ongoing adequate operation.

For information about this and other conventions and group events in Springfield, contact the Convention & Visitors Bureau at 417-881-5300.
